

Mark Cumming is the Governance and Human Rights Programme Officer for Trócaire. He commenced his career as a human resources professional working in Irish and foreign-owned industry. Over the last 17 years he has worked in international development for a range of state, NGO and church development organisations. As part of this he has lived in Kenya and Rwanda while working on community development and human rights promotion programmes. He has an MA in development studies from the Development Studies Centre in Kimmage Manor. His thesis examined attitudes of Irish social partners to the global regulation of multinational corporations.